

Viagra Falls?

Written by
Saturday, 27 January 2007 16:00

Relax... that is just the name of the comedy play we attended this evening with Gayle and Graham.

After a slow start this morning (we all were tired from the past few days) we went into Palm Springs for a wonderful Sunday brunch at Rick's Restaurant and Bakery, the place we first tried last weekend and our new favourite breakfast spot. The "real" freshly squeezed orange juice, the hot coffee and the fresh blueberries on the breakfast waffles are just a few reasons why we like it so much.

From there we headed to the outdoor market at College of the Desert to see what wares we needed and then we meandered over to El Paseo Drive to hobnob with the "beautiful people". Just joking! Actually, it is such a pretty street with the gardens and shops, it is worthy of walking around on. We stopped for an afternoon pick-me-up at The Coffee Bean and then we headed home to relax a bit before our 7:00 o'clock show.

The play was cute and funny; we laughed a lot, the venue was great; not a bad seat in the house and because I am still "only" 51, I had to pay $5 more than the senior 52+ gang I was with! Ha, ha, ha! Apparently, the play will only be playing here until the 21st of February and then at a couple of other small venues before landing off-Broadway in the spring. We were well entertained!