Yesterday the weather stayed true to the forecast in that we were greeted with overcast skies and cool temperatures. As the day progressed, the mercury rose, though not to the predicted 27°C (81 °F) but this morning we were greeted with the promised sunshine once again.

Because it was such a perfect day, Jay wanted to relax at the campground to enjoy the pool and hot tub and get the rest he came here for. We all went into Palm Springs for breakfast this morning and then returned to Catalina Spa. Jay spent the afternoon reading and catching a few rays (with plenty of sunscreen on) at the pool while Rick and I headed back into Palm Springs for an appointment. When we returned, we found Jay back in the Moho reading with Sam by his side.

Much to the cat's disappointment, the three humans went to the miniature golf course where we played a round of golf before heading to the pool for a swim and a soak in the hot tub. After two late evenings in a row we decided to stay in for dinner while we watched a hockey game (Jay is a Maple Leaf's fan) and the movie, Blood Diamond . Sam has been in heaven all night because she parked herself on Jay's lap where she remained until bedtime. Fortunately last night she didn't keep him up all night and end up outside like he threatened!
