Our first grandchild, Makai, turned two years old today on this the twenty-seventh day of December. We were at the hospital two years ago when he made his first appearance; arriving two days later than expected. We have watched him grow in what seems like a flash and been amazed by the changes as he has gone through from being a tiny baby to a toddler!

Today his mom and dad had a little party for him with a few friends, his nanny, Kathi, his great-auntie Christine, and great-uncle Fred, Uncle Jay, Granni and Grandpa. His head is whirling with the continuous festivities and he must be wondering if they just continue daily from now on.

Karley had a friend create the most delicious cake complete with characters from the movie, Cars, and we also enjoyed pizza. Makai loves hearing Happy Birthday To You which we sung many times to his delight! From Christmas he has been “presented” out so the gifts were kept to a minimum this year and besides, he has enough toys to fill a small store.

Happy Birthday Makai, our sweet boy!
