So yesterday, I mentioned that we have been inflicted with a nuisance summer cold and that we were really more inconvenienced by the energy depletion than any other symptoms. Well that was yesterday because today we just plain feel like crap. We are still functioning, though barely, but overall we are just very much under the weather.

Needless to say, my head is numb and I am lacking the brain power necessary to write about anything intelligent so please forgive me and accept this picture of Karley and Monet instead of useless words.
