Here it is...Friday again... already. It seems that Fridays are becoming closer and closer together all the time and the weeks in between fly by. We are already well into July and in just over seven weeks we will be driving away in the motorhome, heading west again.

We are in the process of "renovating", which might sound odd considering we live in a motorhome but after residing in it for almost two years, we know the changes we need to make. We want a foldout sofa bed and when we looked for one in Indiana last month, we didn't find one that was suitable so we have ordered a new one. We are also redesigning the dining area by adding a number of cupboards and having a separate convertible table built that can be used as a coffee table or a dining table to replace the stationary one we have now. (It will also act as a blanket box to keep the extra bedding for the sofa bed in.)

Travel Supreme is compensating us for the new floor, which Rick installed while we were in Vancouver and they are helping us in our bid to replace our seats and Euro-lounger. They are not covered in the distressed leather that they should have been so we are getting new ones to match our ordered couch. Now, besides all the towing paraphernalia, we have a Mastercraft davenport couch, a matching Flexsteel Euro-lounger with footstool and two Flexsteel 8-way power seats with integrated seats belts for sale. So, if anyone reading this is in the market for new used RV furniture, please get in touch with us.
